ALL SAINTS' CHURCH BLACKROCK

Free Self Guided Tour

All Saints church is a must-see building. Built in 1870, in the early English Gothic style, its design through the clever arrangement of its different parts creates the appearance of a building that has grown organically over time. The church seems to be larger than it is, and this impression is echoed in its interior which is light, bright and dominated by the splendid exposed roof of trusses, purlins and rafters.

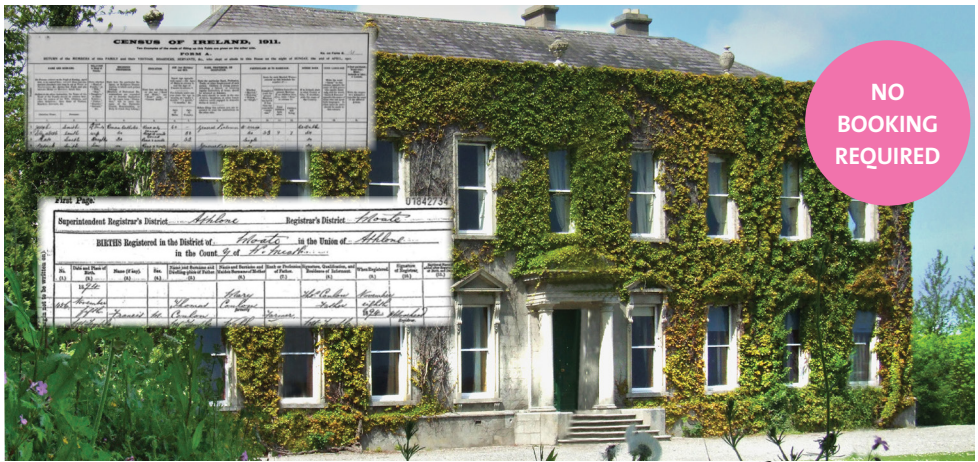

Bus Stop 3168
Carysfort Avenue,
Proby Square
Routes serving this stop:
114 Towards Ticknock

Bus Stop 3199
Carysfort Avenue,
Proby Square
Routes serving this stop:

The building is enriched by high quality Arts and Crafts furnishings dating from the late-nineteenth and early-twentieth centuries: excellent stained glass, murals, high quality wood carving, and a mosaic backdrop to the chancel. The twelve stained-glass windows, dating from 1875 to 1925, include outstanding examples of the work of Wilhelmina Geddes. There are extensive canvas panels painted by Brigid Ganly in the chancel and baptistery, and a long hand-knotted carpet made by the Dun Emer Guild runs through the choir to the altar rails. The interior has been described as “a veritable treasure chest of high quality church furnishings.”

Find your family history in the records! Every time your ancestor had a significant event, records were created and many were stored, some for hundreds of years. There are records which show births and baptisms, marriages and deaths, houses or land that they owned, journeys overseas, involvement in sport, army or police service, court convictions, involvement in historic events, contributions to charities, and many more. With a bit of luck and a little skill, the records of your own ancestors can be traced. Members of the Genealogical Society of Ireland who have been tracing their families and other local families in the area for almost 30 years are here to help you do just that. Templates to help you to set out your personal family tree will be available free of charge.
